Profile

John F. Garziglia is a Member of Womble Carlyle Sandridge & Rice, PLLC, which merged with Pepper & Corazzini, LLP in March 2002. Prior to joining Pepper & Corazzini, John served in the mid-1980s at the Federal Communications Commission as an attorney in the AM Branch and as a trial attorney in the Hearing Branch of the Mass Media Bureau.

John was formerly a broadcaster, working in the industry in St. Louis, Washington, D.C., and several smaller markets. John represents many broadcasters with regard to questions that arise in the day-to-day operations of stations. He is a frequent speaker at both national and state broadcaster conventions, and is frequently quoted in industry trade publications on broadcasting legal issues.

John has represented radio and television broadcasters for over twenty years offering personalized expert assistance in all areas of communications and telecommunications law including transactional and contract negotiations for broadcast station mergers and acquisitions, securing of financing, governmental auctions of new frequencies, license renewals, new stations applications, facility changes, facility upgrades, licensing, and compliance with FCC rules, regulations and policies.
